NEW REPORT MAPS OUT NEXT STEPS FOR OREGON ON TEACHER POLICIES IN NEED OF REFORM

Oregon received a D- in 2009 from the National Council on Teacher Quality with no progress noted over the past year; 2010 Blueprint for Change outlines priorities for improving policies to ensure that students have effective teachers

January 27, 2011 (Washington, DC) — The National Council on Teacher Quality today released its fourth annual State Teacher Policy Yearbook, reviewing state laws, rules and regulations that govern the teaching profession. The 2010 edition differs from earlier versions, providing a Blueprint for Change to help state policymakers prioritize among the many areas of teacher policy in need of reform.

Each state report identifies the policy areas most in need of critical attention, as well as "low-hanging fruit," policies that can be addressed in relatively short order. The Blueprint for Change is based on an updated-for-2010 review and analysis of Oregon's teacher policies. The state received an overall grade of D- in 2009, and this year's Yearbook finds that Oregon made no progress on teacher quality goals over the past year.

The Blueprint for Change is designed as a companion to the 2009 State Teacher Policy Yearbook, NCTQ's most recent comprehensive report on teacher policies. NCTQ President Kate Walsh said, "Our goal with this year's Yearbook is not just to provide analyses of where states are, but to give state policymakers a tool for getting started on the road to reform. To do this, we made this year's Yearbook a compilation of where states were last year, the progress they've made, and the areas in which they need to continue to work toward reform."

Among the findings for Oregon:

Critical Attention Areas -- Some of Oregon's highest priorities include:

- Connecting teacher evaluation, tenure and dismissal to classroom effectiveness;
- Ensuring that elementary teacher candidates are well prepared to teach reading and mathematics;
- Ensuring that teachers have adequate content knowledge by closing licensure loopholes and improving testing requirements; and

- Expanding the teacher pipeline by allowing diversity of program usage and providers and ensuring that alternate route candidates have sufficient content knowledge.

Low-Hanging Fruit – Examples of policy areas for Oregon where a small adjustment would result in significantly stronger policy:

- Ensuring that out-of-state teachers meet Oregon's testing requirements
- Requiring a subject-matter test as a condition of admission to Oregon's alternate route programs

The Blueprint for Change also identifies performance management, pension reform, and certification of special education teachers as longer term systemic issues that Oregon needs to keep in mind as it works on improving its teacher policies.

Walsh continued: "We are encouraged by the significant changes we saw in a number of states during the past year, largely spurred by the Race to the Top competition, but states still have much work to do to ensure that every student is taught by an effective teacher."
