

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
December 14, 2017, 12:01 AM

Contact: Eric Duncan
National Council on Teacher Quality
eduncan@nctq.org
(202) 393-0020 ext. 130

SOUTH CAROLINA EARNS C+ GRADE FOR TEACHER POLICIES IN NEW EDITION OF NATIONAL YEARBOOK

STATE DEMONSTRATES SLIGHT PROGRESS IN TEACHER POLICIES SINCE 2015

Washington, DC--Today, the National Council on Teacher Quality (NCTQ) released its bi-annual 2017 State Teacher Policy Yearbook, finding that states' previous rapid progress to modernize their teacher policies has largely slowed. South Carolina's overall grade for its teaching policies improved from a C grade in 2015 to a C+ grade in 2017. By comparison, the overall grade nationally remained unchanged at a C- grade.

From 2007 until 2015, most states took aggressive steps to improve the teaching profession. However, since the last edition of the Yearbook in 2015, few states have initiated any new actions to improve their policies guiding how teachers are selected, prepared, evaluated, and retained. As a result, state grades have mostly stagnated, with more state grades decreasing than at any other time in the Yearbook's history.

This year, among all 50 states and the District of Columbia, 12 states earned a higher grade than South Carolina, six states performed as well as South Carolina, and 32 states earned a lower grade. Florida and Louisiana both earned B+ grades, the highest in this year's Yearbook.

"States' teacher policies have an enormous impact on the quality of education in the state," said Elizabeth Ross, Managing Director of State Policy at NCTQ. "By highlighting opportunities for improvement, as well as strong policies, this Yearbook is designed to catalyze state action. We know the progress states are capable of making and urge them to do so. Teachers and students deserve nothing less."

South Carolina has a few key opportunities for growth. In its 2017 Yearbook, NCTQ reported that the state earned a F for its policies regarding Special Education Teacher Preparation and a D- for its policies governing Retaining Effective Teachers.

South Carolina's highest marks were B grades for its policies concerning Hiring and Teacher and Principal Evaluation. The Yearbook designated South Carolina a "Best Practice" state for its Provisional and Emergency Licensure policies, under which it requires teachers to meet all state requirements, including passing relevant content-knowledge tests, in order to teach in core academic areas.

The full 2017 State Teacher Policy Yearbook is available here, with comprehensive information regarding each state's teacher policies available in NCTQ's State Teacher Policy Database.

To compare South Carolina to other states across the country in eight key measures, including teacher pay, teacher diversity, and educator equity, please look here.

For more information, or to arrange an interview with Elizabeth Ross, please contact Eric Duncan at eduncan@nctq.org.

The National Council on Teacher Quality (NCTQ) is a nonpartisan research and policy group, committed to modernizing the teaching profession and based on the belief that all children deserve effective teachers. NCTQ is the nation's expert on the quality of teacher preparation programs and evaluates national teacher education against evidence-based criteria. More information about NCTQ can be found on our website, www.nctq.org

###